To better understand the difference between Type and Type, please read this post How do I get a Type object from the System.Type class? I need a method, which would do the following: var t = typeof(string); var s =

ConvertType(t, typeof(System.Int32)); // s == t (string type) Is there any C# (.NET) function like this available? A: You are looking for: Type.MakeGenericType(t, s); This returns a type that is a subclass of both Type and T. Q: NodeJS remote object creation I'm currently working on a nodejs project that will need to connect to various "old" databases (PostgreSQL, Oracle, MSSQL, etc.) and create new objects there. For that, I'm using the NPM package sequelize and mysql nodejs to connect to the databases and create the objects. I'm wondering, how to best go about this process. At the moment, I have 2 options I can think of: Create a new object and run a function that is called when I need a new object from that particular database. Go directly to the database (via Sequelize) and create the objects via string manipulation. For the first option, I'd have something like this: ObjectFactory.getObject('oldDatabase', {}, {},...); and then, in each model I create a method that will do the work getObject: function() { var object; if (this.getDB() == 'oldDatabase edd6d56e20
