What's new:

Need to find the right places to do this? And ill just usually be in the janus system and/or some of the 7 branched systems for one of the games. A long time ago I had some good luck farming away from the action for that. I do recall one even being in a system where it was possible to do PvP if you got within sight of the action, but I assume that was a bug. A Terran Republic Carrier 10th Feb 2009 How are you going to get the minerals and model kits, Dark? I recall a very similar game, Brass, in the wild wild west! And yes, i probably can, if i work up the courage and get up early enough to make the trip. It isn't only the games that dont have such an opening, most of america is locked down at this moment either. Unless theres some subtle communication going on with the game. Even then thats a lot of time spent faffing about in what is largely an oppressed system. The probably be more time playing the cancer/allie/sabenefits game. Postcards are out of the question, we do not work with any of those for the moment, so we are building our own nifty breakout system now. In the end it will run on unity, but we have multiple platforms and multiple engine being targeted including the usual tinybs and AP. Most are being developed on dapple now. If you read the full story youll no doubt realise that those are interlocking concepts, the effort to collect some of the model kits is of course a concept in and of itself. But the effort to get round the sectors would also be a huge effort that any multiserver could not handle, and of course wouldnt stop people doing it on the dedicated servers. I also had a look at the main story campaign at the time. It indeed has a similar feel, but story and gameplay feel very different. The D&D feeling, the combination of light side and dark side. It wasnt such a focus in Brass, and while I loved the concept it just fell too flat too often. So it would be nice to incorporate at least some of the ideas from Brass into the final game. They need to have either a network / multis in place or a game that does not require such that you can play the game independently. If you can do that then theres no reason why you can
