Infection of the embryo with influenza A virus and its interference with the development of the central nervous system. The aim of this paper is to present the neuropathological changes caused by the infection of the embryo with influenza A virus and to discuss the possible interference of the virus with the development of the central nervous system of the chick. The influences of the virus and its virus-coded molecules on cell proliferation, differentiation and migration of the cells of the nervous system are discussed in view of the possible role of these processes in the development of the central nervous system. The results show that infection with influenza virus leads to the death of the infected embryos between stages 18 and 22. Infection also results in an inhibition of cell proliferation, an inhibition of the differentiation of neural precursors and an inhibition of the migration of cells of the nervous system. Infected embryos show an obvious reduction of the number of hemicellulose and endochylema, and a reduction of the size of the cerebral hemispheres, the telencephalon and the mesencephalon. As a consequence of the inhibition of proliferation and migration of neural precursors infection causes cystic degeneration. These results are discussed in relation to the role of the influenza virus in causing encephalitis and with respect to the possible role of the influenza virus in causing mental retardation. Manufacturing Detail: Each machine comes in a box with a description of the product and a crating material. Q: How do I find the exponential of an operator? I would like to find e^A . I know that this is equal to $\sum_{i=0}^{\infty} \frac{A^i}{i!}$. I also know that if A is an integral operator, then $e^A = \sum_{n=0}^{\infty} \frac{A^n}{n!}$. This is assuming that all that matters is the integral kernel of the operator. A: If A is a normal operator, then e^A
