based on the japanese novel disease of the party by yoshikazu takeyama, this film is the story of a poor young working woman, tomoko (tomoko nagoshi), who is forced to work the house of an old man, daimon (sanada ryuzo), for her debt. their relationship gradually begins to change, and daimon begins to sexually abuse tomoko. dissatisfied with the way her life is going, she attempts to commit suicide by killing herself in an empty room. the mother of the novel, the dog and the whale was inspired by her eldest daughter, who was ten years old when the book was written. the mother's husband had left the family for another woman, leaving the mother widowed but with six children, aged thirteen to twenty-six at the time. at this time professor heiwabashi, one of kirino's students at seikei university, was, to give himself an excuse, currently writing a novel about the relationship between a woman and her lover. he felt his novel lacked something, so he set about doing research on the subject, and that is when he came across kirino's book. he began reading and was so captivated by the book that he also decided to write a story about the relationship between a woman and her lover. and so the novel he was writing was born. in the meantime, the serial publication of the novel had continued to the point where it seemed to be heading for becoming a bestseller. in the newsrooms and agencies, all the talk was of how the book might make the sensational headlines. heiwabashi has also been quoted as having said that both he and akiko watanabe, the artist whose illustrations appear in the novel, were struck by the title and so agreed on its translation without having seen the original text.

most importantly, the narrator, too, is a victim of poor choices. as a result, she has lived a life of unrelenting regret, and she now exists in a painful limbo, unable to move forward, unable to move back. but one day, she will meet a handsome young doctor, who, unlike all others she has ever known, will ask her to help him with a job. she knows nothing about him, except that he seems to suffer from an inexplicable illness. and she is intrigued that this very handsome man will so eagerly accept her help. who could it be? in this way, she enters into a nightmare of chance encounters in which she keeps on meeting the same people, each time in an improbable place at a strange time. take a mirror, set it on fire, toss a box of matches into the middle of it, and get ready to watch the flames engulf the world. the book tells the story of a man, married to a woman with a secret no one knows about and desires in bed that are no ones business. he meets a girl, who tells him about the secret, and he takes her to the fire. but when you realize what youre doing, itll be too late. natsuo kirino, ya/adult, published in japan in 2007, english translation by brian bergstrom when i look up at the sky, i usually think about how not to die. sometimes, though, i catch myself wondering why i still exist. because, so far, nothing has happened. nothing has changed. nothing has happened. i see the same things. i sleep. i wake up. i eat. i think. i get up and look at the sky. i spend my entire life doing that. i dont know why i have a body. i dont know why i am me. i dont know why i have you. everything is the same. 5ec8ef588b
